50X1-HUM

Candidates for the active medical officers' school must have passed a less advanced [vocational?] examination, and must be no less than 15 or more than 18 years old.

Candidates for the active quartermaster officers' school must have graduated from a secondary school of economics or completed eight grades in a Gymnasium, have passed an advanced examination, and must not be more than 20 years old.

Candidates for the administrative-bookkeeping course must have passed a less advanced examination, completed their military conscription, and be less than 25 years old.

Candidates for the medical school must have completed eight grades in a Gymnasium, passed an advanced examination with outstanding or very high grades, and must not be more than 20 years old.

Candidates for active officers' schools receive free transportation to the school if they are accepted. They also receive free transportation to and from the place designated for medical examination, free room and board during the period of physical examination, and food for their return journey.

They become military personnel on the day they enter military school. The time spent in school is credited as military service, unless they are dismissed due to their own fault during the first year.

During their schooling, candidates for active officers' schools receive free of charge food, quarters with heat and light, laundry, textbooks, writing, drawing, and other school equipment, clothing and footwear, two pairs of underwear, and a regulation uniform with regulation shoes. They also receive free medical care.

They are paid 150 dinars per month for the first 6 months; 250 dinars per month for the second 6 months; 300 dinars per month the second year; 380 dinars per month the third year; and 420 dinars per month the fourth year. In addition to their regular pay, candidates in the active air force officers' school begin to receive flying pay of 300 dinars per month the second year.

If they are released from school because of illness or temporary unfitness for military service, they may, if they recover and qualify, return to school if they desire.

Candidates are obligated to study diligently and dedicate themselves to becoming as well qualified as possible for the responsibilities for which they are being trained. They are obligated to comply with all existing regulations, orders, instructions, and other rules which regulate their life, work, and conduct in and out of school.

Students in the administrative-bookkeeping school receive 2,500 dinars and free quarters during the course. If they are dismissed for disciplinary reasons, failure in their studies, or because their work and conduct have a bad influence on other students, they are obligated to repay the government for all expenses incurred in their schooling.

Candidates who are accepted in military student centers become military stipendiaries. They reside and eat in military student centers. Their quarters, heat, and light are free. They must pay for food from their allowances.

Military stipendiaries receive a beginning allowance of 3,000 dinars per year, with an additional 100 dinars for each year of schooling completed successfully.

They are entitled to free transportation for travel to and from the place set for their physical examination, to and from school, to and from furloughs, and to and from any work projects assigned. They are also entitled to free medical care, free clothing, and footwear.

Military stipendiaries lose their allowances if, as a result of illness or injuries, they become unfit for service in the Yugoslav Army, or if they fail in their studies to the extent that they cannot complete their courses within the designated period or otherwise. Military stipendiaries who lose their allowances because of failure in their studies, for disciplinary reasons, or because their work and conduct have a bad influence on other stipendiaries are obligated to repay the government for all expenses incurred in their schooling.

Upon completing their studies, military stipendiaries attend officers' courses and take examinations testing their military knowledge for a special rank of active officer. Those who have not already completed their military conscription period before their acceptance as military stipendiaries are credited with having served it after passing the officers' examination.

Each candidate who desires to enroll in one of the military schools, the administrative-bookkeeping school, or as a military stipendiary must present a written application on a form obtained from the military district, and must write his personal history on the second page of the form. The application must have a 10-dinar tax stamp affixed, and 30 dinars' worth of additional tax stamps for attachments to the application. The application will then be taken to an authorized place or rajon people's council, which will write its recommendation or opinion on the same form. The candidate will attach proof that he has completed the required number of grades in the Gymnasium or the equivalent or, if he is attending school at the time of application, proof that he is in the grade required. The candidate will also attach a physical description of himself, and documentation of his financial standing. If the candidate is not of age, he must have written permission from his parents or guardian to attend school.

The completed form and attachments will then be taken to the military district which, if all requirements are met, will send the candidate for a preliminary physical examination. If this is passed, the military district will send the application and attachments to the military post authorized to act on it.

Candidates who are accepted will be sent, at government expense, for a thorough medical examination.

NAVY TO ACCEPT STUDENTS IN NAVIGATION, ENGINEERING SCHOOLS -- Slobodna Dalmacija,
9 Jun 51

During 1951, the Yugoslav Navy will accept a specific number of civilians for 3-year courses in navigation and engineering, beginning 1 October 1951.

Candidates must be Yugoslav citizens, physically and mentally fit, morally and politically acceptable, and unmarried.

They must have completed at least two grades in a Gymnasium in metalworking or the equivalent, with preference being given those who have completed three and four grades in a Gymnasium. They must be not less than 15 and no more than 18 years old. They must make a written pledge to serve in the Yugoslav Navy for 6 years as active noncommissioned officers after completing the courses. They must have written permission from their parents or guardian to take the courses.

Candidates accepted as students assume the duties of noncommissioned officers during their period of schooling.

They receive free food, quarters with heat and light, laundry, textbooks, writing, drawing, and other school equipment, clothing and footwear, two pairs of underwear, and other equipment. They also receive free medical care.

Students who fail a year's work are released. Students who, at the end of the school year or in the final examinations, receive unsatisfactory grades in two principal, or four secondary subjects, are permitted to take make-up examinations. Such examinations are held prior to the beginning of a new school year. Any student receiving one unsatisfactory grade in the make-up examinations is considered to have failed the year's work.

Students who become physically or mentally unfit to perform the duties of noncommissioned officers in the Yugoslav Navy are released from school. Those who miss so much instruction because of illness that they cannot complete the work assigned are released unless they indicate a desire to be assigned to the class behind. Students 17 years of age or older who are released from school because of illness are given credit for military service for the time spent in school.

Upon graduation, students are given the rank of "Vodnik" 2d Class [Chief, 2d Class], and are assigned to units of the Yugoslav Navy to duties which correspond to their ability.

Each candidate must fill out an application, attach a tax stamp for 10 dinars, attach an additional 30-dinar tax stamp for processing the application, and must write his personal history on a form provided by the military district in the area people's council. He must attach a school transcript, statement of his financial standing, physical description, written consent from his parents or guardian to attend the school, and medical approval issued by the nearest military hospital as requested by the military district. Students who are in the Gymnasium in the last grade required for their admission will submit a transcript of their daily grades.

Candidates whose applications have been definitely accepted will be sent immediately, at government expense, for a thorough medical examination.

The closing date for submitting applications and supplementary documents, except the medical certificate and parents' permission, is 15 June 1951.

AIR FORCE TO ACCEPT CANDIDATES FOR NONCOMMISSIONED OFFICERS' SCHOOL -- Slobodna Dalmacija, 9 Jun 51

During 1951, the Yugoslav Air Force will accept a definite number of students in the new class at the Air Force Noncommissioned Officers' School, in the following specialties: airplane mechanics, precision mechanics [instrument mechanics], armorers, radio repairmen, radio operators, T T [heavy gun] mechanics, aerial photographers, and meteorologists.

Candidates must be Yugoslav citizens, unmarried, and physically fit for active service in the Yugoslav Armed Forces, attested to by a medical certificate not more than one month old.

Candidates must have completed at least two grades in a Gymnasium, or the equivalent (in industry, agriculture, etc.). They must be at least 17 and not more than 20 years old. They must make a written pledge that they will remain in the active service of the Yugoslav Army at least 6 years as active noncommissioned officers after completing the courses.

Candidates accepted will be given free transportation to the school. They will be furnished food, quarters with heat and light, laundry, clothing and footwear, textbooks, writing, drawing, and other school equipment free of charge. They will also be given free medical care.

Each student is obligated to study diligently and dedicate himself to becoming as well qualified as possible to fulfill the duties for which he is studying. Each student is obligated to comply with all existing regulations, orders, instructions, and other rules which regulate his life, work, and conduct in and out of school.

Each candidate must present a written application with a 10-dinar tax stamp affixed, and 30 dinars' worth of additional tax stamps for processing the application. Each candidate must indicate the following: whether he wishes to study (1) a particular specialty and no other, (2) one of two specialties, in order of preference, or (3) any specialty assigned by the Admissions Commission.

Because the number of students admitted to any one specialty is limited, candidates who allow the committee to assign them according to need will be the most likely to be accepted. Applications for only one specialty will be returned and not considered further if the specialty is filled.

The candidate will attach his personal history, medical certificate, school transcript, and a recommendation from the enterprise or municipal people's council.

The application and all attachments will be presented by the candidate to the military district of the area in which he lives. The military district will forward the application to the military post authorized to act on it.

Candidates accepted or not accepted will be notified by the military district where they applied.

Detailed information on the courses and the beginning date of the courses is available at the military districts.

Applications must be submitted by 1 September 1951.
